I think because of "deploy" I will go for ARM Templates too. On question 189 that was also the answer and it was also very divided amongst people. A Policy does not deploy anything, it just allows to create resources which must been certain options.

Azure policies seem the right answer. ARM templates is another option to consider.

Though a difference make a wording of the Q:

1) ... deploy objects in a cloud infrastructure ... so it's about Azure Policy, since it deploys objects.

2) though ARM templates provision infrastructure.
