Correct.

Authentication means are you who you say you are.

Authorization means do you have the required authority/permission to do what you want to do that's true, but you want access to resources so it's Authorization.

Which comes after the initial authentication of identity. That is what is being asked for, "the identity". Can't authorise until that has taken place. Otherwise you can just some up the whole log-in process, but that is not what is being asked for.

Think of it like going to a club, they check your name on your ID, then they check to make sure you can get in. Authenticate then Authorize
