Virtual Network in Azure is free of charge. Every subscription is allowed to create up to 50 Virtual Networks across all regions. In this price page, in netwroking, there is no item called Netwrok interface, so it is free.

Yes, removing the unused network interfaces can help reduce Azure costs for the company. Network interfaces are charged based on the number of hours they exist, regardless of their association with a virtual machine. So removing unused network interfaces can help reduce costs.

So the correct answer to your question is A. Yes.

However, we can reduce the Azure costs for the company, by removing, all or some, of the 10 public IPs.

Yes but that is not the solution/question... the solution is that "you remove the unused network int. and does this reduce the cost for the firm?" which it does not as mentioned in the answer.
